no organ at Washington warring on the Democracy of the North, for the sake of securing the next dynasty. That was one nuisance with which the party was not cursed. This is chough for the present; and it makes a very material difference in estimating what is to follow. We believe the party will right itself up; but its first business is to rid itself of nuisances, to throw overboard the Jonahs who have raised the storm. We want some statesmanlike discretion, instead of folly, at Washington. If there be no improvement there, we need not look for improvement elsewhere. We know that the Democracy of the tree States can do if it should prove that he has gone to Europe. what the Democracy of the free States can do, To-day efforts will be made by the police and and we know that they cannot sustain some Justice Welsh to ascertain where he has gone things that have been thrust upon them; and The young lady's brothers are resolved to fol while it is persevered in we may look for worse, instead of better. We assure the Union and its masters, whoever they are, that they can't separate Dougles from the Democracy of the chester, England, during the administration of the chester, England, Delta that they can't separate Dougles from the Democracy of the North. It would have been just as wise, Gen. Taylor. We suppress the name of the twenty-eight years ago, to talk of reading lady for obvious reasons. Jackson out of the party, or just as wise in the coffee house and cross roads politicians, at the same time, to talk of reading Henry Clay out of the Whig party. We regard the recuit of the elections in these States as a scrious calamity. We have given political power to a sectional party, that have no feeling in common with the South. They are as alien to us as if they belonged to a foreign country. We have no justice to expect, or to ask, at their hands. It would not be proper for me to mention names, or I could But they are not necessary. Effect will follow quired cause—as a man sows, so shall he reap; boyhood is the second-time, of which manhood is

As, therefore, you love yourselves, form the habit, while young, of employing all your time usefully. Never be unemployed. The land is full of idlers, striving to live without labor. It is not to be supposed that you are never to take recreation; this is useful, it is necessary—but if it come after hard study or productive labor, it will probably be healthful and moderate. An honorable mind, in the desire of mere relaxation, will not go forth in forms of mischievous exertion. It is not to be supposed that a boy is to be a man, much less an old man; but, in the wider of his mich and his less through his directions. boy is to be a man, much less an old man; but, in the midst of his mirch and hilarity, he may be innocent and amiable.

Paternal Duty. The father who plunged into business so deeply that he has no leisure for domestic duties and pleasures, and whose only intercourse 3 curry k with his children consists in a brief word of authority, or surly lamentation over their intolerable expensiveness, is equally to be pitied and to be blamed. What right has he to devote to other pursuite the time which God has allotted to his children? Nor is it any excuse to say at he cannot suppor his family in their style of living without this effort. I ask by what right can his family demand to live id a manner which requires him to neglect his solemn and most important duties? Nor is it an excuse to say that ha wishes to leave them that competence which he desires. Is it an advantage to be relieved from the necessity of labor. Besides, is money the only desirable bequest which the father can leave to his children? Surely, well cultivated intellects, hearts sensi-ble of domestic affection, the love of parents and brethren and sisters, a taste for home pleasures, habits of order, regularity and instry, hatred of vice and vicious men, and a libely sensibility to the excellence of virtue, are as valuable a legacy as an inheritance of operty, purchased by the loss of every habit which would render that prosperity a blessing.
